Telehealth in Rural Hospitals CJ Rhoads, 2017-07-27 Improving the quality of healthcare while increasing accessibility and lowering costs is a complex dilemma facing rural communities around the world The Center for Rural Pennsylvania believed that telehealth the use of electronic information and telecommunications technologies to support long distance clinical healthcare was a viable solution so it recently provided grants to conduct a thorough investigation into the factors involved Telehealth in Rural Hospitals Lessons Learned from Pennsylvania reports the outcome of this year long investigation Illustrating telehealth implementations in rural settings it supplies an overview of telehealth as well as an assessment of its economic impact The book skillfully intertwines the research and academic aspects of telehealth with helpful insights from the author One of the most important discoveries made by the author and her team of researchers is that all too often money is wasted by implementing telehealth for services that don't impact many people. This book shares valuable insights on using telehealth for integrative health practices that could improve the health of a greater portion of the population. This book illustrates how telehealth can indeed be the healthcare savior that some people believe it will be but only under the right circumstances. It details exactly what those circumstances are so that everyone including clinicians, patients, government entities, and vendors can steer toward the best future path. The author identifies the obstacles preventing wider implementation of telehealth and explains how recent federal legislation will affect telehealth implementation in rural communities. She also points out the folly of developing electronic health records before federal data standards are put into place.

Evaluating the HRSA Traumatic Brain Injury Program Committee on Traumatic Brain Injury, 2006. A traumatic brain injury (TBI) is a brain injury caused by a sudden jolt, blow, or penetrating head trauma that disrupts the function of the brain. It can happen to anyone. The effects of a TBI vary from person to person depending on the force, dynamics of injury, and the patient's anatomy and physiology. People with TBI-related disabilities and their family members and caregivers need comprehensive, coordinated, person-centered systems of care that attend to their changing needs long after their acute injury has been treated medically. At least 5.3 million Americans are estimated to have a TBI-related disability. The Health Resources and Services Administration's HRSA TBI Program, initially authorized by the Traumatic Brain Injury Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-106) and reauthorized by the Children's Health Act of 2000, is a modest federal program with broad ambitions: a $9 million grants program aimed at motivating states to create systems improvement on behalf of persons with TBI with disabilities and their families. In 2004, the federal Office of Management and Budget (OMB) questioned the effectiveness of the HRSA TBI Program, noting that there had been no regular independent evaluations of the program's effects on TBI patients and their families. To address these concerns, HRSA contracted with the Institute of Medicine (IOM) in the spring of 2005 to conduct a study: 1) to assess the impact of the HRSA Program on how state systems are working or failing to work in support of individuals with TBI, and 2) to advise HRSA on how it could improve the program to best serve individuals with TBI and their families. The IOM appointed an 11-member Committee on Traumatic Brain Injury to perform the study. This report presents the IOM Committee on Traumatic Brain Injury's assessment of the HRSA TBI Program's impact and recommendations for improving the program.
