LEARN EVOLUTION VIRTUAL LAB

ANSWER THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS AS YOU COMPLETE EACH PART OF THE VIRTUAL LAB

Answer the following questions as you complete each part of the virtual lab.

Part 1: Introduction

1. As you begin the virtual lab, you will see a field of 1000 birds and a population of 1000 seeds. What happens when you introduce a mutation into the population? How does the population change over time?

Initially, the birds are green. When you introduce a mutation, the birds change color. The population of seeds also changes. The birds that are green are able to eat the seeds, but the birds that are blue are not. This means that the green birds are able to survive and reproduce, while the blue birds are not. Over time, the population of green birds increases, and the population of blue birds decreases.

2. As you continue to experiment, you will see that the population of green birds increases over time. Why does this happen? What happens when you introduce a mutation into the population?

Evolutionary change is the result of natural selection. The birds that are green are able to eat the seeds, and they are able to survive and reproduce. The birds that are blue are not able to eat the seeds, and they are not able to survive and reproduce. Over time, the population of green birds increases, and the population of blue birds decreases.

3. As you continue to experiment, you will see that the population of green birds increases over time. Why does this happen? What happens when you introduce a mutation into the population?

They survive better in their environment. The birds that are green are able to eat the seeds, and they are able to survive and reproduce. The birds that are blue are not able to eat the seeds, and they are not able to survive and reproduce.

4. As you continue to experiment, you will see that the population of green birds increases over time. Why does this happen? What happens when you introduce a mutation into the population?

Species with similar body types and behaviors. One example of this is the finches on the island of Darwin. The finches that are green are able to eat the seeds, and they are able to survive and reproduce. The finches that are blue are not able to eat the seeds, and they are not able to survive and reproduce.

5. As you continue to experiment, you will see that the population of green birds increases over time. Why does this happen? What happens when you introduce a mutation into the population?

Evolutionary change is the result of natural selection. The birds that are green are able to eat the seeds, and they are able to survive and reproduce. The birds that are blue are not able to eat the seeds, and they are not able to survive and reproduce.
