

Assembling Your Writing Portfolio

Why a writing portfolio?

A writing portfolio is a collection of your work that you've completed during a semester, a year, or even a lifetime. Portfolios show a few different things:

- They show how you have grown and developed as a writer. Nobody ever becomes perfect as a writer. (Not even people who are professional writers!) But almost everyone changes, develops, and improves on certain aspects. A semester portfolio is your chance to show how you've grown in certain areas of your writing.
- They show work that you are proud of. This is your chance to say what you did really well during the semester. And you can talk about why you are proud of it. Your instructor is interested to see what you enjoyed the most and what you learned the most from.
- They show what you've taken away from this semester, and what you will use in the future. You will have a chance to write a reflective essay that gives you a chance to really think about what you learned about yourself as a writer.

Portfolios are not graded in WRD, but they are carefully looked at by your instructor. (If you do not turn in a portfolio, however, you will receive E for the semester.)

Instructions

Please include the following items in your portfolio:

- Include the final draft of every major written assignment you handed in this semester in WRD 110, 111, or 112. This includes any proposals you may have completed.
- Include the rough draft of your major assignment.
- Choose three other kinds of writing you did in your WRD class. These can even be informal writings, minor assignments, blog posts, free thoughts, etc. Choose writings or work that you feel proud of or that shows something about you as a writer.
- Choose at least one other kind of writing you did either for another class this semester or writing you did for yourself (outside of school) during the semester. You may include up to three other pieces of writing. Examples include:
 - A lab report for your BIO course.
 - A long letter you wrote to your landlord about a complaint.
 - A blog post you did on your personal blog.
 - A short story you wrote.
 - An essay you wrote for your History course.
 - An essay for a summer internship position.
 - A website you created for your cousin's business.
 - Many other possibilities
