Vertical Food Web Interactions Konrad Dettner, Gerhard Bauer, Wolfgang Völkl, 2012-12-06 In the past years much work has been carried out on either life history evolution or structure and function of food webs However most studies dealt with only one of these areas and often touched upon the other only marginally In this volume we try to synthesize aspects of both disciplines and will concentrate on how the interactions between organisms depend on their life history strategies Since this is a very comprehensive topic this volume will focus on vertical interactions to remain within a clearly arranged field We present some scenarios based on life history variation of resource and consumer and show how particular patterns of life history combinations will lead to particular patterns in trophic relationships We want to deal with the selective forces underlying these patterns the degree of specificity of the consumers determines the dependence on its resource and its adaptation to the spatial and temporal availability of the resource In this respect the spatial structure of the resource and its quality may play an important role The impact of natural enemies is another important selective force which may influence the evolution of interactions between species and the structure of communities Here the acquisition of an enemy free space may provide selective advantages The importance of the impact of enemies is also expressed by the development of numerous and sometimes very subtle defense strategies This will be demonstrated especially for various aspects of chemical ecology
