	External Ear The external ear consists of the pinna (auricle) and the ear canal. The pinna is the visible part of the ear that collects sound waves and directs them into the ear canal. The ear canal leads to the eardrum (tympanic membrane).	Middle Ear The middle ear is located behind the eardrum and contains three small bones: the malleus, incus, and stapes. These bones are responsible for transmitting sound vibrations from the eardrum to the inner ear.	Internal Ear The internal ear is located deep within the skull and contains the cochlea and the vestibular system. The cochlea is responsible for hearing, and the vestibular system is responsible for balance.	ENT History Take a detailed history of the patient's symptoms, including the onset, duration, and progression of the problem. Ask about associated symptoms such as pain, discharge, or hearing loss.	ENT Physical Exam Perform a thorough physical examination of the head and neck, including the ears, nose, and throat. Use an otoscope to examine the ear canal and eardrum, and a laryngoscope to examine the larynx.	ENT Differential Diagnosis Consider a wide range of conditions that could cause the patient's symptoms, including infections, allergies, and structural abnormalities.	ENT Management Develop a management plan based on the patient's diagnosis and symptoms. This may include medical treatment, surgery, or a combination of both.
	Nasal Cavity The nasal cavity is the part of the respiratory system that is located inside the nose. It is lined with mucous membranes and contains the olfactory epithelium, which is responsible for the sense of smell.	Paranasal Sinuses The paranasal sinuses are air-filled cavities that are located in the facial bones. They include the maxillary, ethmoid, sphenoid, and frontal sinuses. They are connected to the nasal cavity by small openings called ostia.	Throat (Pharynx) The pharynx is the part of the respiratory and digestive systems that is located in the neck. It is a muscular tube that is shared by both systems. The pharynx is divided into three parts: the nasopharynx, oropharynx, and laryngopharynx.	ENT History Take a detailed history of the patient's symptoms, including the onset, duration, and progression of the problem. Ask about associated symptoms such as pain, discharge, or hearing loss.	ENT Physical Exam Perform a thorough physical examination of the head and neck, including the ears, nose, and throat. Use a nasal speculum to examine the nasal cavity, and a laryngoscope to examine the larynx.	ENT Differential Diagnosis Consider a wide range of conditions that could cause the patient's symptoms, including infections, allergies, and structural abnormalities.	ENT Management Develop a management plan based on the patient's diagnosis and symptoms. This may include medical treatment, surgery, or a combination of both.
	Pediatric ENT Pediatric ENT is a subspecialty of otolaryngology that focuses on the diagnosis and treatment of ear, nose, and throat conditions in children. Pediatric ENT conditions are often different from those seen in adults, and require specialized knowledge and skills.	Pediatric Ear The pediatric ear is unique in that it is still developing. The ear canal is shorter and narrower than in adults, and the eardrum is more delicate. This makes pediatric ear conditions more difficult to diagnose and treat.	Pediatric Nose The pediatric nose is also unique in that it is still developing. The nasal cavity is smaller and more narrow than in adults, and the mucous membranes are more sensitive. This makes pediatric nasal conditions more difficult to diagnose and treat.	Pediatric Throat The pediatric throat is unique in that it is still developing. The larynx is smaller and more narrow than in adults, and the vocal cords are more delicate. This makes pediatric throat conditions more difficult to diagnose and treat.
