

Socialization as a Lifelong Process

✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Introduction

Socialization alludes to the deep-rooted procedure of acquiring and dispersing standards, traditions, and philosophies that give an individual the abilities fundamental for integration (Socialization 1). Some social researchers say socialization speaks to the procedure of learning all through life and is a focal impact on the conduct, convictions, and activities of grownups and kids. With restricted social experience, newborn children can build a feeling of personality through impersonation.

Youngsters steadily figure out how to play the parts of others. By implication, the individual develops ideas based on imitation. The stages of the lifelong process include childhood, adolescence, transitional adult, middle years, and older years.

However, the socialization process is influenced by ethnicity, gender, and social strata. For example, the problem-solving capability of a child is different from an adult. Thus, change is a continuous process, which is influenced by socialization. Previous literature revealed that children adapt through imitation, which is the primary feature of socialization. They complete activities by emulating their parents, guardians, and brothers. Thus, we adapt to socialization by taking the responsibility of our image models (Socialization Throughout the Life Span 2).

Socialization after childhood

Socialization is a learning procedure that starts soon after birth. The child realizes his or her identity, which is influenced by socialization. Thus, association and integration are influenced by socialization. As we age, we enter a new status, which supports re-socialization to manage different situations. We likewise have encounters that show us lessons and conceivably lead us to adjust our desires, convictions, and identity. Thus, socialization after childhood reintegrates the individual with other aspects of society (Tomlin 2).
