

Environmental Impact Analysis

This section provides details about various activities involved in the construction project, such as site clearing, structural construction, use of construction materials like concrete and steel, and transportation of materials to

Impact Evaluation

This section is divided into several parts:

- Impact Categories: Identification and evaluation of potential environmental impacts on various aspects, such as air quality due to construction dust, water quality degradation due to runoff, and changes to natural habitats around the project site.
- Mitigation Measures: Proposing strategies to reduce or prevent these impacts, for example, by regularly watering to control dust, employing eco-friendly technologies, or mitigating habitat changes by preserving specific areas.
- Residual Impact Analysis: Reviewing impacts that might persist despite mitigation efforts and planning how to monitor these impacts during and after project completion.
