Trends in Dietary Fats Research M. V. Landow,2006 Fats have important functions in the body Fats and oils are also called lipids Fats are the most concentrated source of food energy Per gram fats have over twice as many calories as protein or carbohydrates Fats supply nine calories per gram whereas carbohydrates sugars and starches and protein supply four calories per gram Our bodies store excess dietary fats in fat cells to meet later energy needs Excess dietary carbohydrates and protein also are converted into fat by our bodies and stored for later use In addition to supplying energy fats have several important functions Fats give foods their characteristic flavours Fats help provide a feeling of satiety or fullness Dietary fats carry the fat soluble vitamins A D E and K Fats are also a source of the essential fatty acids linoleic acid and linolenic acid Because the body cannot make these essential fatty acids they must be provided in the diet There are three types of natural fats found in foods These are monounsaturated polyunsaturated and saturated fats Most foods contain all three fats in different amounts Another type of fat is trans fats These fats are formed when vegetable oils are processed into margarine or shortening through a process called hydrogenation This new book brings together new research in this sometimes confusing but critical area of research Annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry. v. 19, 1902 ,1903
