How do organizations regulate complex systems through feedback mechanisms?

A feedback loop occurs when a system's behavior changes through a process, and the change then feeds back into the system, affecting its future behavior. This is not always a desirable outcome. For example, a company's sales might increase due to a marketing campaign, but the resulting increase in sales could lead to a decrease in profit due to increased costs. This is a negative feedback loop. This is a positive feedback loop.
