There are many underlying and deep seated attitudes towards natural resources and the Earth that should be explored in conjunction with environmental problems and solutions
The idea of developing ecological intelligence and examining issues from a systems thinking perspective is essential to fostering and environmental ethic

In order to measure the success of this goal pre course and post course surveys and assessments will be used to gauge student attitudes opinions and the extent to which the students consider the relationship between first world culture and environmental issues with an awareness they did not have prior to taking the course
