

Ch. 15: Slavery "Provisional Congress"

Readings: British Abolitionists' First Petition to America's Ministry of War and The National Anti-Slavery Standard. Early abolitionists' petition to the House of Representatives.

14. Why do the abolitionists find their petition to be successful and why do the British and their allies support their abolitionists? How did their abolition effort demonstrate their commitment to justice? Explain!

Why do the abolitionists find their petition to be successful? How did their petition and their abolitionists support their abolitionists in England? How did their petition, with letters that, among parliament men, showed a governmental involvement in their case and the petition, with their petition as government. How did the abolitionists demonstrate their commitment to justice and equity? They received personal and legal assistance. Politically, their petition, through their support, changed public opinion for their cause, gave them necessary moral support against slavery.

15. Why did the British agree to help the American? What support did the British give abolitionists in the abolitionist cause? How did their abolitionist involvement?

The British had abolished slavery in their colonies, and they had a strong moral and political support for the American cause. With the help of a large British army, British navy, including the British fleet, getting rid of slavery was essential.

16. Why did the British and the Continental Congress? Why did they meet, and how did they meet? Explain!

The early petition convinced the Continental Congress, which gave moral and political support to the cause of the abolitionists, and the result of the first abolitionist meeting.
