Gettysburg Address

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this globe, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a national cemetery, so that those who here gave their lives might have a final resting place. It is for us the living, rather than the dead, that we here dedicate this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, can never forget what they have here done, and we are here to dedicate this ground to the memory of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is for us the living, rather than the dead, that we here dedicate this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, can never forget what they have here done, and we are here to dedicate this ground to the memory of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is for us the living, rather than the dead, that we here dedicate this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, can never forget what they have here done, and we are here to dedicate this ground to the memory of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live.
