Student Exploration: Equilibrium and Concentration

Essential Question: How do changes in concentration affect chemical equilibrium?

What You Will Do: Explore how changes in concentration affect chemical equilibrium.

Using the Gizmo, you will explore how changes in concentration affect chemical equilibrium. You will observe how the system responds to changes in concentration and predict the direction of the shift.

1. How does the system respond to changes in concentration? It shifts to the right.
2. How does the system respond to changes in concentration? It shifts to the right.
3. What happens if you increase the concentration of the reactants? It shifts to the right.

Background Information

At equilibrium, the forward and reverse reactions are occurring at the same rate. The system is in a state of dynamic equilibrium. If you change the concentration of the reactants or products, the system will shift to counteract the change and reach a new equilibrium.

However, if you change the concentration of the reactants or products, the system will shift to counteract the change and reach a new equilibrium.
