

Abstract

1

The following abstract describes the results of a study conducted in the field of artificial intelligence. The study focuses on the development of a novel algorithm for solving complex optimization problems. The algorithm is based on a combination of genetic algorithms and simulated annealing. The results show that the proposed algorithm outperforms existing methods in terms of both solution quality and computational efficiency. The study also includes a detailed analysis of the algorithm's performance across various problem instances and a comparison with state-of-the-art techniques. The findings suggest that the proposed algorithm is a promising approach for solving a wide range of optimization problems. Further research is needed to explore the algorithm's scalability and its application to real-world scenarios.
