ICE HOCKEY

Ice hockey is a sport played by two teams trying to score goals against each other. Goals are scored when the puck goes into a net. Hockey players hit the puck using their hockey sticks.

Ice hockey is played on a flat surface of ice, usually in an arena or on an outdoor pond. Hockey players wear skates to move around on the ice. They also wear protective gear, such as helmets and padding to keep them safe from injuries during the game. Hits, crosses, and punches of all ages and levels enjoy playing this sport.

Ice hockey is the national winter sport of Canada. In 1976, Canada became the first place to have an organized indoor game of ice hockey. Many teams in the National Hockey League have several Canadian players and Canadian men and women have had considerable success in international competition.

TOTEM POLES

Aboriginal people carved totem poles as a way to share stories about their families and clans. The pictures on the poles were also a way of keeping records of important historical events. The Aboriginal people made their totem poles from cedar trees because cedar wood is more durable than other types of wood. By using cedar wood to make their totem poles, the stories about the Aboriginal people's families and clans would be preserved for future generations. The carvings record them of their ancestors, telling them about their accomplishments, adventures, and rights. Sometimes the carvings represent stories. The stories may be a myth, legend, or stories about the person/humanity by the totem pole. Some of the most popular carvings on totem poles are eagles, ravens, thunderbirds, bears, humans, various other animals and frogs. Large celebrations occurred when totem poles were raised with many Aboriginal people gathering to witness the event.
