During photosynthesis, plants use sunlight to convert carbon dioxide and water into glucose and oxygen. The glucose provides energy to the plant, and the oxygen is released into the atmosphere. Animals use the oxygen to make energy through respiration. During respiration, animals use oxygen to break down glucose into carbon dioxide and water. The carbon dioxide and water are then used by plants to make food through photosynthesis. The water cycle is a continuous process that moves water around the planet. Water evaporates from the ground and oceans into the atmosphere. In the atmosphere, water vapor rises and cools, forming clouds. When the clouds become heavy, water falls as rain or snow. This water can then evaporate back into the atmosphere, or it can infiltrate the ground and become groundwater. Groundwater can then flow back to the oceans or be used by plants and animals. The water cycle is a continuous process that moves water around the planet.
