CAMOUFLAGED MOTHS CREATIONS

Name: _____

Camouflage is a type of adaptation that can be shaped by natural selection. Camouflage refers to the ability of an organism to blend in with its surroundings, making it less visible to predators or prey. This adaptation enhances the organism's chances of survival by reducing the likelihood of detection. Natural selection plays a crucial role in the development and persistence of camouflage in populations over time. Individuals with traits that provide effective camouflage are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on their genes to the next generation.

PEPPERED MOTHS AND NATURAL SELECTION

During the industrial revolution in England, a form of dark-colored moth, known as the peppered moth, became more common. This was due to the increase in pollution caused by factories, which resulted in the darkening of tree trunks, making the light-colored moths more visible to predators. Over time, the population shifted to a mix of the survival advantages of different traits within the population.

However, the rise of industrialization in the industrial revolution brought about significant changes in the moth's environment. The increase in pollution caused by factories resulted in the darkening of tree trunks, making the light-colored moths more visible to predators. This change in the environment led to a shift in the survival advantages of different traits within the population.

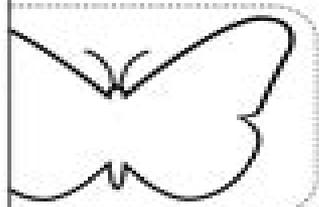

Natural selection, the process by which traits best suited to an organism's environment become more common in a population over time, played a significant role in the peppered moth's evolution during this period. The dark-colored individuals had a genetic variation that allowed them to be better suited to their changing surroundings. The dark moths now had a survival advantage as they were camouflaged against the dark tree trunks. They were less likely to be spotted and eaten by predators, giving them a higher chance of reproducing and passing on their dark-colored genes to the next generation. The proportion shifted from predominantly light-colored moths to a mix of light and dark moths. This shift in the peppered moth population demonstrates the power of natural selection in response to environmental changes.

NO VISIBLY ADAPTED

ADAPTED TO ENVIRONMENT

Write your observations about their moths. How do you think your camouflaged moths are protected from predators? How many moths you find.

Camouflage is an advantageous adaptation.

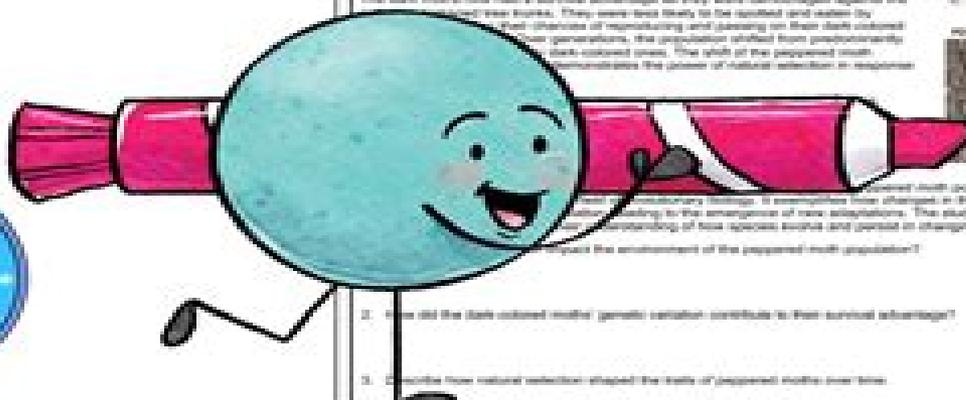

1. How did the dark-colored moth's genetic variation contribute to their survival advantage?

2. How did the dark-colored moth's genetic variation contribute to their survival advantage?

3. Describe how natural selection shaped the traits of peppered moths over time.
