

Organization of a Research Paper:

Introduction

A good introduction is relatively short. It tells why the reader should find the paper interesting, explains why the author carried out the research, and gives the background the reader needs to understand and judge the paper.

Specifically, the Introduction defines the nature and extent of the problems studied, relates the research to previous work (usually by a brief review of the literature clearly relevant to the problem), explains the objectives of investigation, and defines any specialized terms or abbreviations to be used in what follows. Remember that the Introduction leads logically to, and clearly states, the hypothesis or principal theme of the paper.

The Introduction should be relatively brief; most journals recommend less than 500 words. Avoid repetition: do not repeat the Abstract in the Introduction (and Introduction in the Discussion). Do not go into an extensive literature review; two to four most relevant and recent citations should be adequate to corroborate a statement. Do not repeat well-known facts nor state the obvious. For example, it is disappointing that even now, i.e., after more than 30 years of concerted efforts in scientific agroforestry and a large volume of literature in the subject, some manuscripts—and, interestingly, some editors—insist on providing a definition of agroforestry in any article on that subject! The Introduction section also may use different tenses: justification and motivation of the study is presented in present tense (“Soils store relatively large amounts of carbon in terrestrial ecosystems.”), whereas the review of literature is presented in past tense (“Studies showed that ...”), or in present perfect tense if it is common knowledge (“Studies have shown that ...”). The objective is written in past tense (“The objective of the current study was ...”). Different journals follow different norms and styles. Some want discussion of literature in the Introduction while some want it in the Discussion section. Some journals require a brief account of the Materials and Methods to be included in the Introduction section, and some may want even the important conclusions presented in the Introduction section, although that tendency is now disappearing.

abstract Academic writing is a task that students especially in the social sciences engage in very frequently during the course of their studies They have to compose essays research reports term papers etc which besides being the basis for students evaluation are to prepare them for their professional careers later in life For those who will stay in the field writing is going to be a major activity At university a student s writing skills set him or her apart from other students in the eyes of the professor but there is no real competition all papers will be read by the instructors In the professional world however with an abundance of academic texts and with limited time only those articles will get attention that besides containing profound reasoning are at the same time well written i e conveniently structured precise short well formulated etc This paper is part of a study on academic writing conducted within the seminar Academic Discourse The study examines students works with regard to the authors writing skills It looks at the various components of a student term paper linguistic features and structural elements to detect the problems German students of English have The objective is to create a guide for current and future students in this department experiencing difficulties in this area It combines advice from published writing guides and professors linguistic theory and personal experience and is to be an introduction to academic writing for beginners and a reference booklet for the more experienced We did not attempt to produce a How to manual but rather tried to name the problem areas and to offer help on those with advice and examples It cannot take the responsibility off the students for the
