Be ready to interpret various graphs and selection curves.

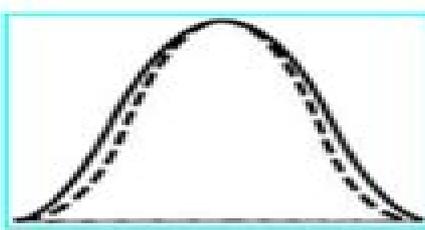

Review the Dr. Darwin article and questions. (I cut this from the unit this semester, disregard!)

1. Explain speciation. The evolutionary process of the creation of new species is known as SPECIATION
2. What are homologous structures? These are body tissues that are formed from similar tissues but have been modified for different functions. (Human Leg vs. Horse Leg)
3. What are analogous structures? These structures are similar in appearance and function, but have different origins. (Bird/Bat/Insect Wings)
4. What are vestigial organs? These are parts of an organism that have little or no apparent purpose
5. What is artificial selection? This is when man selects which organisms to breed, so they are selecting for traits, rather than nature.
6. What is the difference between stabilizing, directional, and disruptive selection?

Directional Selection:
here the mean value for a trait shifts in a particular direction.

Stabilizing Selection:
Normally occurs in an unchanging environment.

Disruptive Selection: works against individuals in the middle of the spectrum and for those at the ends.

7. What are some examples of artificial selection? Cows that give more milk, species of dogs, gigantic crops, etc
8. What ship did Darwin sail on? HMS Beagle
9. Based on the article we read, why don't scientists believe that dinosaurs fied? (another disregard!)
10. Explain fitness. This is the ability to pass your genes on to the next generation.
