

A Modest Proposal

For Preventing the Children of Poor People in Ireland, from Being a Burden on Their Parents or Country, and for Making Them
Beneficial to the Public

By Jonathan Swift

Collected and annotated by Jack Lynch

Swift was Irish, and though he much preferred living in England, he resented British policies toward the Irish. In a letter to Pope of 1729, he wrote, "Imagine a nation the two-thirds of whose revenues are spent out of it, and who are not permitted to trade with the other third, and whose the pride of the women will not suffer [allow] them to wear their own manufactures even where they excel what come from abroad. This is the true state of Ireland in a very few words." His support for Irish causes has made him a renowned figure in modern Ireland. The paragraph numbers have been added for this edition.

What does Swift intend about the way to propose in the paragraph?

[1] It is a melancholy Object to those, who walk through this great Town,¹ or travel in the Country, when they see the Streets, the Squares, and Public-Houses, crowded with Begging of the Female Sex, followed by three, four, or six Children, all in Rags, and importuning every Passenger for an Alms. These Miseries occasion'd by being able to work for their bread (if that word be used in its proper sense) or being oblig'd to beg Subsistence for their helpless Offspring, who, as they grow up, either turn Thieves for want of work, or leave their dear native Country in flight for the Protection of Spain,² or sell themselves to the Barbadoes.³

[2] I need not be assur'd by all Parties, that this prodigious number of Children, in the Town, on the Sea, or in the Woods of their Mothers, and Inequality of their Fathers, is in the present desperate state of the Kingdom, a very great additional grievance, and deserveth whatever could think and a fair, though not very method of making these Children useful and useful Members of the Commonwealth, would do well to be well of the public, so to have his share set up for a preservation of the Nation.

[3] But my Intention is very far from being confin'd to provide only for the Children of professed Beggars; it is of a much greater extent, and shall take in the whole number of Orphans, at a certain Age, who are born of Parents, too indigent or idle able to support them, as those who demand our Charity in the Streets.
