

Writing Effective Justifications

Thank you for your dedication to providing high-quality ratings for our platform! Your contributions are crucial in training our Assistant to deliver accurate and insightful responses.

This guide focuses on writing effective justifications for your ratings. While assigning scores is essential, your written feedback provides invaluable context and helps us understand your reasoning process.

What makes a good justification?

A good justification clearly explains the rationale behind your rating. It should highlight the specific aspects of the response that led you to your decision.

Here are some examples of clear and helpful justifications (even simple and to the point are good!):

Examples:

- Good: "Factually correct and followed SI, but did not address the prompt's request to end with a conclusion."
 - Why it's good: This justification identifies both positive aspects (accuracy, adherence to system instructions)
