

5.5 EXCAVATED MATERIAL AND LOADS NEAR EXCAVATIONS

The influence of any loads near the excavation can cause ground collapse. Any excavated material and external actions applying a load to the ground nearby can affect the excavation's stability through the zone of influence. The zone is normally from the base of an excavated face to the surface. The zone's angle will depend on site-specific factors.

Mechanical plant, vehicles, spoil, or heavy loads should not be in the zone of influence plus 1 m from an excavation unless specific design can show it can support the surcharge load.
